The second annual Regulatory Reform Summit is taking place today in Washington, D.C. The event is hosted by Networks Financial Institute which is an initiative of Indiana State University.

Institute Executive Director Liz Georgakopoulos says the Summit is bringing together policymakers from Congress, members of the Bush administration and leaders within the financial services industry.

She says the group will touch on investigations into the insurance industry, the campaign for the renewal of the Terrorism Risk Insurance Act, mutual fund industry developments and social security reform.
