Four Networks Scholars represent ISU at Regulatory Reform Summit

Washington, D.C. - Four Indiana State University Networks Scholars were recently selected from the 29 scholars on the Terre Haute campus to represent the University at Networks Financial Institute's second annual Regulatory Reform Summit on March 2 - 3.

One of the four students was sophomore insurance/risk management and accounting major Michael Haseley of Argos. In addition to attending the event at Washington's Ronald Reagan Building and International Trade Center, Haseley had the opportunity to mingle with more than 100 policy-makers, legislators and financial leaders who also attended. A dinner and reception on the eve of the Summit and a tour of the Capitol Building to observe some of the action on the Senate floor were also included.
